Language Teaching Insights from Other Fields: Psychology, Business, Brain Science, and More
Christopher Stillwell, Editor
What could a language teacher learn from a neuroscientist? This second volume of Language Teaching Insights From Other Fields is, at heart, a book about exploration and about seeking inspiration from beyond routine contexts. The chapters, written by language teachers with extensive experience in other fields, yield surprises that translate to new ways of thinking about teaching and the classroom. Language teachers who open this book tap into a living library of their colleagues’ knowledge and experiences.

Cat Got Your Tongue? Recent Research and Classroom Practices for Teaching Idioms to English Learners Around the World
Paul McPherron and Patrick T. Randolph
Why do questions about idioms often leave us “tongue-tied” in our classrooms? The authors were motivated from their own experiences to find answers to this question and offer effective ways to address idioms, collocations, multi-word phrases, and other types of formulaic language in the classroom. The authors offer suggestions and examples for incorporating idiom learning into classroom activities and curriculum in a variety of contexts. Includes ready-to-use lesson plans and an abundance of available resources to draw from.

Assessing Language Learners in U.S. Schools
Timothy L. Farnsworth and Margaret E. Malone
Why assess? And what will I do with the results? This book examines classroom assessment (not standardized assessment) through the lenses of three ESL teachers from across the United States. The teachers face a number of challenges particular to their individual situations, and other challenges which all public school teachers face. The decisions they make about assessments in the areas of literacy, oral language, and content-specific language development help teachers and students plan and implement assessments.

Preparing Teachers to Work with English Language Learners in Mainstream Classrooms
Luciana C. de Oliveira and Mike Yough, Editors
This book is for teachers, administrators, and teacher educators who are looking for innovative ways to prepare teachers for ELLs and positions teachers to empower these students and is aimed at preparing teachers in contexts that do not have historically large numbers of ELLs, but have had high rates of recent growth, e.g., Midwesten U.S.). A combination of teacher preparation and ELL issues, this volume is unique in that it addresses presence and in-service teacher preparation. Co-published with Information Age Publishing

Preparing School Counselors for English Language Learners
Luciana C. de Oliveira and Carrie Wachter Morris.
It is vital that school counselors know how to reach and support the growth of English language learners, tailored to students’ developmental level. Yet, traditionally information about how to best work with ELLs, their families, and the community around ELL-related issues may not be adequately integrated into school counselor preparation programs. This volume in the ESOL for Different Profession series addresses that gap.

NEW SERIES! ELT IN CONTEXT

Context is everything. Every lesson and location, and every student and teacher, are unique. This fundamental truth means that every context is different; the more we know about other contexts, the better we can understand our own. Yet, when we are immersed in our own context all the time, we eventually stop noticing our surroundings. The authors in this series were asked to step back from the English language teaching and learning contexts that they are most familiar with and look at those contexts with fresh eyes. The result? A ground-breaking series aimed at TESOL professionals who are considering working in language teaching and learning organizations (LTOs) in various contexts and countries, and who need a clear, concise, and up-to-date account of what it is like to live and work there.

Given that the Common Core State Standards are being adopted in so many parts of the country and the demographic is shifting in the number of ELLs, it is imperative that teachers be prepared to address and adapt the CCSS to the language and content needs of ELLs. This series focuses on this urgent need to provide guidance for teachers who will be implementing the CCSS in classrooms with ELLs. The audience for these books is practicing teachers, pre-service teachers, graduate students, academics, researchers, and professional development providers, and can be used in a variety of courses, including methods, literacy, and mathematics courses in elementary and secondary teacher education programs. The books are also a resource for practicing teachers implementing the CCSS with ELLs and professional development providers who work with practicing teachers.

Each chapter provides Reflection Questions and Action Plans that are useful for practicing teachers, pre-service teachers, graduate students, academics, researchers, and professional development providers.

This collection of classroom testing ideas was contributed by teachers whose aim was clearly to help their students. Consequently, the contributions look more like assessment activities than like tests, because they are thoroughly integrated into the language teaching and learning processes. More than 100 activities enlighten both students and teachers about the effectiveness of their language learning and teaching but do not stand out as different, formal, threatening, or disruptive.

Nikki Ashcraft and Anh Tran, Editors
Listening is the most important of the four language skills and is used most often in everyday communication. This volume shares successful practices employed by teachers at different levels of education around the world and shows how they built listening activities around a corpus of academic speech, a checklist of listening dimensions, a manipulated text, a telephone message on healthcare, a song, working in pairs, a challenging movie, and several more creative topics.

Multilevel and Diverse Classrooms
Bradley Bourain and Phan Le Ha, Editors
Multilevel classrooms—also known as mixed-ability or heterogeneous classrooms—are a fact of life in ESOL programs around the world. Chapters approach multilevelness from a holistic and humanistic perspective by considering diversity not only in language skills and proficiencies, but also in learning styles, purposes, and contexts.

Assessing Language Learners in U.S. Schools
Timothy L. Farnsworth and Margaret E. Malone
Why assess? And what will I do with the results? This book examines classroom assessment (not standardized assessment) through the lenses of three ESL teachers from across the United States. The teachers face a number of challenges particular to their individual situations, and other challenges which all public school teachers face. The decisions they make about assessments in the areas of literacy, oral language, and content-specific language development help teachers and students plan and implement assessments.

Advocating for English Learners: A Guide for Educators
Diane SIZER Farmer
English learners (ELs) are the fastest growing segment of the K-12 population. But ELs and their families who are in the process of learning English and navigating an often-unfamiliar education system may not have a powerful enough voice to articulate their needs.
Consequently, all teachers and administrators must advocate for this all-important diverse group of students who will become tomorrow’s workforce. This book demystifies the techniques of advocacy for ELs.
