CALL- Reading Skills
The significance of the incorporation of CALL into language learning and teaching was noticed in 1983, during one of the annual TESOL conferences held in Toronto where more than ten percent of presentations concerned CALL and also some software was demonstrated.
Computers can present the text in a variety of ways apart from a plain printed one. The text can be accompanied by animation and sound which make both the text and reading more interesting.
The Internet is based on written language, it requires well developed reading skills to be “surfed through”

Do you look up to the main character or person in this text? Why or why not?

I look up to Mary and Sally because they know how to solve problems. Mary is my favorite. She is so silly and awesome.

I hear the word ‘awesome’ quite a lot. Think of a different word that will help me really understand what you are trying to say.

Each month, your teacher wants you to try and accomplish the goals on the list.

Treasure Island

At the beginning of this look, could you have guessed what was going to happen next? Was your guess close to what really happened?

Yes, I was expecting that the character will be able to find the treasure. But I wasn’t expecting so much turn and twist in the story of this look.

Have you written enough?

Your answer is long enough. When you are done, check your grammar and make sure you answer the question well!
