

Know Better, Do Better Cards

You just learned that your blurred vision is due to an issue that will require surgery on both of your eyes. Your doctor explains that he was trained in the early 1990s and doesn't keep up with modern medical practices but assures you that all will go well.	Congratulations! You've just purchased a new home. After signing the mortgage, you learn that the brothers who built the house used materials that had been in storage since 1985. In the basement, you can see evidence of asbestos and newspaper insulation.
The IRS accuses you of having committed tax fraud. Your neighbor offers to take on your case for free, with the caveat that she hasn't kept current with tax law since finishing law school in 2005.	A former administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency has been reassigned to the position. Part of her strategic plan is to revise air quality standards, using guidelines from 1971.
