

Uncovering Education Myths

We used to believe...	Now we believe...
1. More homework equals more learning.
2. Students just need exposure to texts in order to learn how to read.
3. When language learners receive rich, comprehensible input, they will become proficient in that language.
4. Zero-tolerance policies make schools safer.
5. Parents who come to school events care more about their children's academic achievement than other parents.
6.
7.
